According to a Facebook post on the Service's page, the body was located Friday morning in the rural community of High River, about a 20-minute drive south of Calgary. The post says the forensic identification is pending. "We are hoping to get some additional information from that, and once we do we'll have more information," says Sgt. Rob Harley with the Service. "We know from going through the public release that there's a connection to the missing person case. I'm not really prepared to say at this point." Police are asking the public to refrain from speculating on what they believe the body to be. The Service will be releasing more information on Monday. "When we look at crime scenes, sometimes, as we start through the investigation, we link a crime scene to a location outside of Calgary," says Harley. "We'll be following up with that in the hope that it leads us to answers."
